Hey Steve,

KYB for onboard linked here.

Complete KYB, gives access to Bridge account, operate through Bridge dashboard or API.

Let me know when you complete KYB so I can progress it through approval.

Freddie

Hey Frederick – thanks for this! Any update on spinning OUSD up? We're excited to dig in here.

Open Standard have said they'll charge a maximum of 25bps on the yield, they're hoping to set the fee much lower than that at launch.

Hey Frederick – thanks for clarifying. Makes sense.

Is there any documentation on:

- Yield economics — assuming it maps to Treasury yield, but what's the expected management fee / spread retained?
- Existing/supported on- and off-ramps — both through Bridge and major players in the ecosystem. Particularly interested in supported currencies, geographies, and rails.

Other than that, we'll stay tuned for things to get spun up.

Yes OUSD rewards are distributed to the platforms where OUSD is being held.

The testing live right now is $500 per account, which is Zed.
Testing here isn't referring to Zed's users testing, it's just Zed testing.

Yes we can get you spun up with access to it.

Next steps we get you spun up with access.

Hey all, just two quick questions:

- Do the accounts held still get some sort of yield in OUSD?
- Is that $500 limit per transaction, per account, or total for Zed?

Best,
Pete

Ok, let's go with OUSD.

Is the testing limit per end user or per entity (i.e. Zed)? Can we fully build things out in prep for the launch on 9/15? What are the next steps?

Hi Steve,

As I briefly mentioned on the call in regards to our fee schedule -- for all white label stablecoins, even closed loop stablecoins, we need to include committed minimum mint dollars in the contract. Since we only take our fee from the yield generated on the underlying reserves, the AUM or size of the mint impacts the economic viability for us.

Given that this is a proof of concept for you, initially targeting ~50 customers, if you can't commit to a minimum mint, which is usually in the many millions of dollars, perhaps starting this PoC with Open Standard's OUSD is the best path here.

- Open Standard announcement
- OUSD 1-pager
- OUSD is currently live for testing, limited to $500
- Open Standard is targeting 9/15 live public OUSD launch

If your PoC using OUSD is successful and you'd like to roll the product out more broadly, then we can better determine at that point if you should just continue on with OUSD, or if there's additional benefit to having your own white label stablecoin.

How does that sound?

Regards,
Freddie

I'm guessing the defaults will be totally fine, but what are they? We probably have a slightly bias for an EVM chain, but would mainly be solving for cost and speed. An L2 like Base would be perfectly sufficient.

Hi Steve,

Great to speak just now.

Congrats again on your traction and exciting future ahead.

Notes:

- Closed loop Zed white label stablecoin
- Zed can on/offramp in PHP
- ~12k customers, doubling every quarter, ~$300 avg spend per month
- PoC white label stable to 50 customers as quickly as possible, build PoC this quarter
- Privy self custody wallets
- Bridge white label stablecoin open issuance dev docs

I'll get back to you asap on fee schedule and next steps.

Hi Steve,

Wanted to apologize personally here as I know it's been difficult getting back in touch. I spoke with the Privy team last week who mentioned that both privy wallets and stablecoin issuance are top of mind. As a result wanted to make sure you speak with @Frederick Allen and the Open Issuance team directly who can help with all things stablecoin issuance. Sorry for the swirl here!

Best,
Christian

Hi Steve,

I'm looping in Frederick Allen (cc'd), who specializes in issuance and will be a fantastic person to dive in with and hit the ground running.

Apologies for the confusion on my end - I'll go ahead and cancel our meeting for later today. In the meantime, here's Frederick's calendar so you can grab time that works for you:

Sorry for blowing up your vacation Christian! We're super excited/motivated to build here; even discussed this part of the product roadmap at the Board level and there was a ton of enthusiasm. I just wanted to make sure we didn't lose contact with you guys because of the previous delays on our side. Ready to hop onto a meeting whenever you're back.

FYI - i'm meeting with the Privy team on Monday to discuss the self-custody piece.
